"Swimming to the Moon" is a delightful read not only for children, but for the adults who often have to read a book over and over again to the child at the other end of the book. Kids so love to be silly and it reminds us that silly can be good. As I was reading it to a 6 year old, I heard this: " Now wait, what does that mean?"

The Swim to the Moon is an extraordinary open-water swimming adventure through the picturesque Hiland Chain of Lakes near Hell, Michigan. Participants choose their distance — half mile, 1.2 mile, 5K, or 10K — and have the time of their lives swimming through Southeast Michigan's most sublime waterways, all the while showing support for a very worthy cause: North Star Reach, a camp for children with life-threatening, serious, and chronic medical conditions.

Swimming to the Moon by Robert Drewe - Goodreads

Like all the best children's tales and poems must have, Swimming to the Moon offers some wise and heartwarming lessons to take note of. My two favorite poems were "Above the Bottom" and "(I Need More Than) A Penny For My Thoughts" particularly because of the underlining "life lessons" that it highlighted through a bouncy rhyme.

Floating would feel about the same on the Moon as on Earth, since how high in the water you float depends only on your body's density compared to the water's, not the strength of gravity. Swimming underwater would also feel pretty similar. The inertia of the water is the main source of drag when swimming, and inertia is a property of matter
